Taylor Walton raises £1,250 for Grove House hospice

The Family Law department of Taylor Walton solicitors has raised £1,250 by offering a fixed 30 minute first appointment in return for a voluntary contribution to Grove House Hospice in St Albans.

Taylor Walton solicitors have been a long-standing corporate supporter of Grove House hospice in St Albans. At the Firm's recent Autumn Reception, Aileen Hartnett, Head of Family Law, was able to present a cheque for £1,250 to the charity. The money was raised by offering prospective new clients requiring help with matrimonial and children matters a free 30 minute consultation in return for a £20 donation to Grove House.

Aileen Hartnett, Head of Taylor Walton's Family department, commented:

"We consider Grove House to be a very important local charity and are delighted to be able to support it. This is our tenth year of running these free consultations and prospective clients have been more than happy to contribute towards such a worthwhile cause".
